RECOMMENDATION:

City staff recommend that the Council approve an interlocal agreement with the Central Utah Water Conservancy District.

BACKGROUND

The City is currently in the process of designing a pump station to be located in the City of Saratoga Springs to supply water under certain water supply agreements with the Central Utah Water Conservancy District (the "District"). The City anticipates the cost of the pump station to be approximately $2.5 million. The interlocal agreement would require the District to assume full responsibility for all costs and expenses incurred in connection with finalizing the design, bidding and construction of the pump station. In exchange, the City would agree to acquire a regional water utility right-of-way and easement corridor for the District through the City. Upon receipt from the City of the required franchise and easement rights, the District would re-convey to the City all of the District's right, title and interest in and to the pump station.
